Day care settles after student is sexually abused

By SCOTT LAUCK

Ryan D. Frazier

A day care facility reached a $1 million settlement with the family of an autistic boy who was molested by another student, according to their attorney.

Ryan D. Frazier of Monsees & Mayer's Springfield office, said the plaintiff was 13 at the time of the sexual abuse, which took place in a bathroom while the children were not being properly supervised by staff.

Frazier said the perpetrator admitted during an interview with state officials to initiating the abuse and teaching the plaintiff sexual acts. The names of the parties and the location of the day care were not disclosed.
